

Commercial Storage Building - 20634

This building was built for the Tulalip tribes to store their numerous precious artifacts. Some of those artifacts would eventually be displayed at the Hibel Cultural Center although at the time this was built, the Cultural Center had not yet broken ground. We worked with the team from Tulalip to design the building that would best suit their short and long term needs.

PermaBilt has built other buildings for this customer in Tulalip, however this commercial building was impressive for not only its looks, but its overall size in general. It measures 84' x 124' x 16'. The massive structure contains (15) approximately 6' x 4' framed openings. (4) 10' ridge vents adorn the peak of the roof. Most of PermaBilt's overhangs measure 18", this one's full perimeter overhangs measure 24". A 10' x 10' insulated commercial roll-up garage door is also in place. After we completed our work, the customer installed the beautiful log supported walkway to give it a true Northwest feeling and conducted a traditional Native American blessing ceremony for the buildings.

We were honored to be a part of this project.
