

Arched Lawson Door

Our customer in Clallam County had a vision of the building she wanted for her horses on her beautiful rural 5 acre property. We were able to design a building that fit the bill except for one item – the hinged barn door she envisioned. So, our construction department teamed up and designed a hinged barn door that would not only meet the customer’s aesthetic needs, but also function without sagging or warping over time. We named this door, the Lawson door after our customer.

Once we had built the Lawson door, we built this prototype for a Lawson door with an arched top. We loved the look and added it to our line of available accessories.

We were glad to have helped our customer with her needs and expand upon her original idea. As they say, necessity is the mother of invention.
