

Dutch Door

Dutch doors are extremely popular in horse barns for many reasons. The bottom door keeps the horses in the barn as desired and the top half opens and can be secured against the building with a latch which keeps the horses in the stall, but still allows for socialization. Or conversely, the entire door can be opened for paddock access.

We've offered wood Dutch Doors for many years. The most recent addition to our Dutch door line is the steel Dutch door pictured above. Plywood is covered with 29 gauge steel and trimmed with azek (made of a PVC material with a polymer cap for superior stain and scratch resistance). Then we add galvanized then powder coated T-hinges and latches for beauty and durability. These doors are handmade specifically for your project and are a beautiful complement to any barn.